22. In this case, USAID initially identified an end-state goal of 6,750 MW of generation, and PCO (DoD) later set it at 6,000 MW. GRD (DoD) later identified the goal of U.S. contribution as 2,555 MWs. The NEA recently responded to SIGIR’s question on electricity with yet another measure: “new generation, restored generation, and maintained generation”; GRD-PCO, response to SIGIR, March 27, 2007; NEA, response to SIGIR, April 10, 2007.
23. USAID provided a different breakdown of the following sector apportionments (in $millions): Electricity, $814; Democracy, $815; Education, $185; Health Care, $82; Transportation, $47; and Water Resources, $399. The total amount is $2,975 million. (USAID, response to SIGIR, April 21, 2007.)

43. IRMO, response to SIGIR, April 20, 2007. An IRMO electricity expert reports results that conflict with results reported here by established SIGIR sources. For example, the electricity expert reports that this quarter Baghdad received 10.5 hours of power per day (SIGIR reports 6 hours of power), and the rest of Iraq receives 13.4 per day (SIGIR reports 12.0 hours of power). Variations also occur in pre-war levels and current demands across the country.
44. GRD, response to SIGIR, April 18, 2007, notes that “4,500 MW represents a short-term peak and that the full pre-war average for 2002 was

- 4,300 MW”

 48. GRD-PCO response to SIGIR, January 20, 2007, notes that project start is defined as project awarded and the contractor beginning to design, procure equipment, subcontract and conduct site, geotechnical surveys and other pre-mobilization work. Others define project start when the contractor has a continued presence at the project site. Although more applicable to bricks-and-mortar work, much electricity work is done before site mobilization.

 67. GRD, response to SIGIR, April 18, 2007, p. 9. It is better to report a measure of oil production capacity at the end of the quarter rather than take the quarterly average because the level of capacity is not prone to fluctuate frequently throughout the quarter.
 68. IRMO, response to SIGIR, April 20, 2007, p.2, notes that crude oil production is measured in gross and net amounts. Gross production does not include oil re-injection, and net production subtracts out crude oil re-injection. Oil re-injection occurs when oil is pumped back into the ground because of a lack of storage capacity. IRMO and NEA/I report gross production. DOE/EIA reports net production.

 82. GRD-PCO, response to SIGIR, December 29, 2006. The last construction projects are Qarmat Ali pressure maintenance in Basrah. GRD oil sector has proposed converting the last five cluster pump stations to Engineering and Procurement, with final installation of pumps by the South Oil Company (SOC). If approved, the last construction project is estimated to finish in May 2007; otherwise, July 2007.

 84. Although the ideal measure for U.S. reconstruction efforts in the water and sanitation sector would be an increase in the number of Iraqis who have access to potable water and sanitation services after the completion of U.S. projects in this sector, the lack of comprehensive data on pre-war water access makes any comparison speculative. Consequently, efforts to accurately assess the impact of U.S. reconstruction efforts on water and sanitation services are limited. Initially, IRMO measures of U.S. reconstruction efforts overestimated the amount of potable water reaching Iraqi households, mostly because significant loss occurs when water moves from treatment plants to consumers.
 85. IRMO, Water and Sanitation Metrics, response to SIGIR, December 6, 2006. IRMO defines additional system capacity—both new and rehabilitated—as “the maximum increase in system capacity over the pre-project conditions that would result if all of the post-project system capacity were utilized.” This metric is a best-case scenario and assumes that all installed system capacity can and will be used. IRMO defines maximum additional persons served considering actual conditions as “the potential beneficiaries rather than actual number of individuals who are receiving improved water or sewer services.”

86. According to GRD, the number of projects moves up and down depending on local conditions and priorities set by IRMO.

384. The amount obligated for FY 2006 ESF is a calculated estimate from two sources—GRD's Program Review Board document of April 9, 2007, and the USAID Activities Report of April 10, 2007. GRD reports $178.7 million in FY 2006 ESF obligations; USAID reports $433 million in obligations. SIGIR could not find a single data source that delineates the total amount of dollars obligated to the FY 2006 ESF. 393. Invoices are bills submitted for payment. Disbursements are the payments.
394. For purpose of this analysis, SIGIR used the DoD definition because DoS does not have a formal definition of unmatched disbursements in its financial management policies or procedures. This definition is contained in the DoD Financial Management Regulation, Volume 3, Chapter 11. According to the DoS Director, Financial Reporting and Analysis, a program office rather than an accounting office accepts the transaction, but the DoD definition is otherwise applicable.
395. Of the original 15 projects, 2 projects were subsequently cancelled.
